

Creative Craft...

I've always embraced change, even though it is sometimes a little scary! I like to keep busy, and I'm always looking for new challenges.

After working in administration for several years in the public sector, I decided to change direction 6 years ago and started a website design business called e-Vision. Focusing on simple and functional design, I have worked with a number of clients including the NHS, the Voluntary Sector and Women on Top.

I am on the committee of an international literary society and edit the membership magazine; I have been involved with my local stitching club for ten years and I have a fascination for history and archaeology. When I am not working, I am kept occupied by my two adult daughters, my young granddaughter and I'm very lucky to have a wonderful husband, Ray, who supports me in everything I do.

I enjoy needlework and creative design of all kinds. I have recently completed a City & Guilds Certificate in Embroidery Craft and Design and am now working towards a Diploma. I have just started a new Textile Art business called Craft Arena, and I am really looking forward to passing on my skills to others by holding craft and design workshops.

I intend to grow Craft Arena into a centre where local textile artists can showcase and sell their work, as well as providing the inspiration and supplies for people to create their own works of art.

You can visit me at www.craftarena.co.uk to find out how my plans are progressing.

As well as the new venture, I will be continuing with my website clients, and am looking forward to the new challenges ahead.
